RECOLLECTIONS OF JAMES G. BLAINE

Some New Stories of the Great Modern American Commoner.

Which Help to Explain His Wonderful Hold Upon the Affections and the Imagination of the American People

Writes Orrville H. Stewart in the Times-Herald: Upon taking editorial charge of the Kennebec Journal, Mr. Blaine soon familiarized himself with Maine politics by studying the files of the Journal, and he studied them closely as far back as 1825. By this means he soon became the best posted man in the state on Maine politics, and he was looked upon as authority. His able editorials during the campaign, bringing up political matters of the past, showed careful research, and they were copied widely. It was while editor of the Journal that he was one day stopped on the street by an old lady whom he had never seen before and asked to write up the wedding of her daughter, which occurred the night before. Blaine had served his time in congress and went to Maine to speak during his campaign, when at the close of his speech he began shaking hands with the masses crowded around him. An old lady with wrinkled brow and whitened hair, bearing a babe in her arms, approached and offered her hand, 'Why, how do you do?" said Mr. "Where's that daughter of yours I wrote up that wedding notice

"Poor Lucy is dead," said the old lady, and her eves filled with tears. This is her child."

reached over and kissed the little blue-

REMEMBERED IT WELL.

During the Greeley campaign in '72 ex-Governor Cumback, of Indiana, spoke with Mr. Blaine at Springfield, Ohlo. This was early in the campaign. Just before the election Mr. Cumback was sent up in Blaine's state to make a speech. He was told by the committee that he would find Maine people very stiff and inhospitable, and quite different from the western people. Mr. Cumback was surprised, however, at his enthusiastic reception, there being large crowds everywhere, and he never had a more enthusiastic meeting than at Augusta. He told Blaine of the incident and his agreeable disappointsaid the statesman, "they had a man of unusual stuff to get them stirred up. Such a man on a speech as you are would have a good recep-

"But what do you know about my speech?" asked the governor, 'Didn't you speak with me over at Springfield?" said Blaine, in a way as a reminder. Then he went ahead and told Mr. Cumback all about his speech, of the crowd present, and gave promptly all the main points of the speech, and even named the party with them. He also remembered at what hotel they put up and what day of the week

VISITED THE SICK.

Another instance of Blaine's great memory is cited in the following story, as told by Mr. Cumback: buring the Garfield campaign Mr. choice, $2.30a4.36; common, $2.50a3.40; choice lambs, $5.30a5.50; common to good lambs, $4a4.15; yeal calves, $6.50a7.

was entertained by Mr. Cumback and driven over town

"There's a sick man in that house there that has been talking you up for president for four or five years," said the governor, "and he thinks there is no one like Jim Blaine.

"Me for president?" said Blaine. Yes, you for president. Do you want to stop and go in to see him a minute? Nothing would please him-

They went in and remained a few minutes. Blaine trotted the children on his lap and talked freely with the sick man, whose name was David Kerr. Blaine and the governor met at Garfield's inauguration.

"How are you, Will?" asked Blaine, and he asked all about the men he had met in Cumback's town several months before, and called nearly all of them by their first names. "Oh, yes," he said, "how is Dave Kerr? Did he ever get well? Poor fellow, he suffered ter-ribly. And those little children, how about them?'

This may be considered a wonderful feat of memory. It was in October when he met these people, and it was on the 4th of March, nearly five months afterward, that he recalled his visit, remembering the name of every person he was introduced to on that day. He had seen a million people since that time and had shaken hands with and met thousands.

FORESAW HIS DEFEAT.

Mr. Cumback accompanied Mr. Blaine on his speaking tour through Indiana during his campaign in '84. It was just days before election. Cumback left him at Lafayette, saying that he wouldn't see him again till the inaug-"I don't know," said Blaine, doubt-fully, "I'm afraid it won't be." He had an unusual vacant, far-away look in his eyes, and he was very seri-ous. His words came slowly and hesitatingly. Mr. Cumback assured him that there was no doubt, but Blaine shook his head.

"I don't know," said he; "I've had a sort of feeling for the last week that I wouldn't be elected. I hope I will, but the outcome is doubtful, and I feel now like it is very doubtful. But if I am defeated I will go to work the next day on my book."

And he did. He began the second volume of his "Twenty Years in Congress" the next day after the election. HIS CLOSEST FRIEND.

Hon, W. H. Goddard, a member of the Indiana house of representatives, bears the distinction of having been closer to Mr. Blaine than any other man in Indiana. The story of how the friendship of the great premier was won is a very interesting one.

At the time when Blaine was a shining light in the house Mr. Goddard was auditor of the treasury. The news that Blaine was about to make his great speech in reply to the master effort made by Hill, favoring amnesty for the rebels, reached Goddard late in the day before the speech was to take place, He at once remembered that filed away in his trunk was a speech delivered some time before by Hill at Atlanta, in which the speaker asserted that he would rather go to the penitentiary than apply for amnesty for the rebels, and had made remarks at length in that strain. The next morning before congress met Goddard succeeded in getting an interview with Blaine in cloakroom. He produced the speech showing the headlines to the congress man. He fairly grabbed it out of Goddard's hands.

"Where did you get this speech?" he inquired eagerly.

"I assure you that you need not doubt its genuineness," said Mr. Goddard.

Blaine took the address, and in his great speech which he made an hour later, which resounded over the world at the time, he threw Hill's former words at him with great force. The latter, taken by surprise, did not have time to defend himself, and the plumed knight added another laurel to his From that day on Blaine and Goddard were the stanchest friends, and during Garfield's campaign Goddard was the only man in Indiana who could induce Blaine to come to his state.

HOW A CAT FALLS.

Scientific Reasons Why She Always Lands on Her Feet. pular Science News,

M. Marey has been studying this problem, by taking sixty instantaneous photographs per second of a falling cat, from different points of view. He finds that a cat always falls on its feet, pro-This is her child."

The man with the big, kind heart fall in and enable it to make a half turn in the air, so as to get its feet undermost. It holds its paws vertically, and manages to preserve this position during the rest of its fall, in spite of the initial movement of rotation taken by its body. The mechanical explanation is simply that the animal, by thrusting forward its left limb, shifts the center of gravity of the whole body, so as to make it revolve upon the axis of the spine, until the feet reach the ground. An old solution of the question is that the legs of a cat are so long that when stretched out they overbalance the body. Moreover, a cat does not hurt itself by a fall from a height, not only because it invariably falls on its feet, but because the structure of a cat's back and spine is extremely flexible. The muscles of its legs, also, are extraordinarily strong and numerous, and further, it has elastic pads or cushions consisting of a mass of fibrous tissue and fat on all its feet, seven in each fore-paw and five in each hindpaw. The cat nearly always alights on these pads, which, by reason of their elasticity, break the force of its fall.
